Denies Threats to Man Who 'Tipped' Officers

Harry Young, Third Member of Family Not Held in Slayings

Springfield, Mo., Officers Do Not Believe He Aided in Killing Officers

THREATS REPORTED

Notorious Slayings of Six Officers Found Slain in Apartment

HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—Paul Young, brother of Harry and Jennings Young, slain desperadoes, appeared Friday at police headquarters and denied that he made threats in connection with the trapping of the police of his brothers, wanted for the slaying of six Springfield, Mo., peace officers last Saturday. Harry and Jennings were trapped in a cottage here Tuesday and either committed suicide or killed each other. Springfield police said they believed Paul was connected with the slayings there.

Reported Threats

HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—J. F. Tomlinson, whose tip to police led to the discovery of the hiding place of Harry and Jennings Young, Missouri slayers who killed themselves here in preference to surrender, was reported unofficially Thursday to have received threats against his life.

Police Chief Percy Heard refused to comment on the reports, other than to say he might have "something to say" about them. Tomlinson denied any threats had been received. Tomlinson, reported by her to be somewhere in the city going about his business as a carpenter contractor, had not been found by reporters.

Chief Heard declined to say whether police protection had been provided for the contractor.

Meanwhile a decision as to where the brothers who shot themselves Tuesday in Tomlinson's home when a posse surrounded it, would be buried still had not been made late Thursday. Police issued orders for Paul Young, brother of the killers, to be arrested if he appeared here, although he had been exonerated by Missouri officers of any complicity in the murder of the officers.

Detective Chief Erik Irwin would not say why he wanted Paul arrested except to remark: "We just want to get a look at him and talk to him. Besides we have two minor charges against him."

Damages Refused In Death of Man

Widow Sought Payment for Death of Husband by Suicide

PRESCOTT—A jury in Circuit Court here Thursday returned a verdict in favor of W. L. Britt and R. E. DeLaughter against Mrs. Alice Sheltz, who was suing for damages charging her husband became despondent and committed suicide following an injury received while working near Boughton. He was building a road when three of his ribs were broken. Britt and DeLaughter are well known merchants and farmers of Boughton, and are interested in road building projects in Arkansas and Louisiana. The plaintiff had introduced his testimony when court recessed in the case of Howard R. Jackson against the Prescott and Northwestern Railroad Company. Jackson is a resident of Little Rock. During 1926, while an engineer, he was severely scalded when his engine turned over in the local yards. He received $12,000 in settlement of his claim, but charges his injuries were greater than physicians informed him at the time of the settlement.

Prosecuting Attorney Carl E. Bailey of Little Rock is one of the attorneys for Jackson.

Twenty men were appointed on a membership committee by the post at their meeting at the city hall Thursday night. The ten men who secure the most members each will be banqueted at a chicken dinner, to be paid for by the men who secure the smallest number, who will dine only on a fare of beans.

This committee has asked for a six hour day, and a five day week, in order to distribute employment to as many people in industry as possible.

LONGVIEW, Tex.—(AP)—A passenger train demolished an automobile on a grade crossing four miles west of Kilgore Thursday killing A. Z. Rodgers of Oil City, La., and his mother, Mrs. J. Rogers, 70.

Low hanging fog apparently prevented Rodgers from seeing the approaching train until too late.

Rodgers' wife left the party a few minutes before the wreck to visit a daughter living near Kilgore.

Rodgers, a drilling contractor and oil operator, moved to the East Texas oil field about six months ago, establishing his headquarters at Gladewater.

50 Per Cent Cut in Teachers' Wage May Save Schools

O. A. Graves, Hope District Attorney, Reveals Teachers' Assistance

REQUIRE TEST SUIT

Much Depends on Whether Debt Limit Is $60,000 or $80,200

Hope's school teachers have agreed to a 50 per cent reduction in salaries provided the Board of Education can finance other expenses for a full nine-months term, and a threatened suspension of local schools at the close of the first semester this month may be averted. O. A. Graves, attorney for the Hope School District, told the Rotary club at luncheon Friday in Hotel Barlow.

The plight of the public schools of Arkansas was discussed fully by Mr. Graves, who devalued for the first time in a public statement that there was grave danger of Hope's schools shutting down at the end of January.

Mr. Graves, who spoke as a private citizen and not officially for the district, said the crisis was provoked by the passage in the 1931 regular session of the legislature of the school reorganization act, which limited all indebtedness of school districts without giving a legal status to the floating, or unsecured, debt that existed prior to the passage of the act.

"The reorganization act," he said, "bundled up all the school laws in the state into one new law." We are particularly concerned with the provisions of the law which aimed to put the schools on a cash basis, just as amendment No. 11 in 1924 attempted to put cities and counties on a cash basis.

Cash Basis, Aim
"The purpose was good; but it was contemplated at the same time to provide additional revenue and power to clean up the floating or unsecured indebtedness, so that the schools might start on a cash basis and observe the law from the beginning.

This follow-up legislation, however, fell by the wayside. The legislature stipulated that the total indebtedness of any school district must not exceed 7 per cent of the assessed valuation of the district. If the district was already over that limit, then bonds could not be issued to absorb current indebtedness or for any other purpose whatsoever.

"For many years the Hope schools had borrowed a year in advance of their revenues. Taxes were levied in the spring, collection were made in July—but these funds were absorbed by outstanding warrants; and in September the schools had to borrow money again for the coming year.

Floating Debt Overlooked
"This was our condition—and we were in the midst of our construction program for the new high school building—when the legislature passed the reorganization act limiting indebtedness and, accidentally, prohibiting school districts from recognizing their floating debt which actually was just as much an obligation as their bonds.

"Such a law says that whenever the school directors find they cannot operate within the debt limit they must close the schools, or by exceeding the legal limit will make themselves personally liable for the excess indebtedness.

"The teachers of the city have generously consented to accept 50 per cent of their regular salaries for the balance of the school year, providing the board can work out other details in order to finish the second term. It is likely that a friendly suit will be filed in the near future to determine what the real debt limit is.

"The Hope district has an estimated annual revenue of $60,000, and at the time of the passage of the reorganization act had a floating or non-bonded debt of $80,200. The law is clear on one point, that the total indebtedness must not exceed 7 per cent of the assessed valuation of the district; but it is not clear whether our current debt limit is our $60,000 annual revenue, or the $80,200 mark where we rested at the time of the passage of the new law.

Possible Balance Seen
"Assuming the $80,200 limit, then, we have outstanding warrants to date at $55,000, leaving a borrowable balance of $25,200. An additional $8,000 must be deducted for interest on the bonded debt—leaving a net balance of $17,200 that may be available this year in the event the district sustains its point at law.

Mr. Graves discussed the construction of the new high school building.

Former Resident to Present Singers

Texarkana Choir to Sing Here Sunday Afternoon January 10

The immortal cantata "The Coming of the King" by Dudley Buck will be sung in the Episcopal church of our city Sunday afternoon, January 10, at 3:15 by the choir of the First Baptist church of Texarkana under the direction of Mrs. Helen Ruffin Marshall, and Mrs. Lloyd White, organist, featuring some of the best vocal talent of the southwest.

Those who have heard this masterpiece of Mr. Buck's composition are loud in their praise of its wonderful thrilling interpretation of the matchless Christmas story.

These visitors have spent much time and work in preparing for the rendition of this great Cantata and are coming at their own expense to sing it for the people of Hope. It is hoped and urged that our people will show their appreciation by giving the visitors a worthy hearing. Our people enjoy good music and should fill the auditorium to its full capacity for this feast of song.

There will be no admission charge but a free-will offering will be taken all of which will be given to the Ladies Auxiliary of St. Marks Episcopal church.

1930 Drouth Set Record in State

Fulton, With 126 Days in 1897, Held Record for 33 Years

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—An analysis of drouths in Arkansas presented before the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Harvey S. Cole of the Little Rock weather bureau showed that although the state has had longer drouths over small areas, the one of 1930 in reality set a record for territory affected and disastrous results.

Cole said Arkansas observers agreed that periods of 5 days without rain in summer will begin to damage crops in the hills, but not in the lowlands, and that such short periods will do no damage in winter. However, for a basis, all 15-day periods without rain in summer and all 20-day periods without rain in winter were included in the drouth table which he presented with the analysis.

This table showed that there were 844 periods in the 33 years of records in Arkansas considered severe enough to be called drouths, 204 of them being for only 15 or 20 day periods. The number decreased rapidly for the longer periods, only 10 being listed for 100 days or longer.

The average number of drouths per year is 2.13; for drouth of 20 days or more 1.52; for 30 days or more 0.69; for 40 days up 0.39; for 50 days up 0.26; and for 100 days up 0.025.

The longest drouth in the 33-year period was 126 days at Fulton in 1897, the 125-day drouth at Dardanelle the same year being a close second. A drouth of 138 days occurred at Little Rock in 1887, ten years before the 33-year table started.

"However," Cole said, "the 138-day drouth of 1887 with 3.34 inches of rain was not as severe as the 107 days of drouth and only 0.87 inches of rain at the same station in 1930."

The firm announced they would make this present to the first 1932 baby born anywhere in Hempstead county, but the name of the baby did not appear in the final edition yesterday.

Escaped With $7500 In Daylight Holding of Sevier Co. Bank

Green Notorious in State as Bandit, Killer and 'Bad Man'

HELD AT MALVERN

Malvern Cashier Identified Him in Bank Robbery There Also

DE QUEEN, Ark.—(AP)—Fulton Green, who was sent to prison in 1926, was held here Friday on a charge of robbing the bank of Horatio last April. Green was brought here Thursday night from Malvern, where he faces a bank robbery charge and is identified by the cashier of the bank. He was held in the sum of $10,000 bond.

Daylight Robbery

The Horatio bank was robbed in daylight on April 13, 1931. The robbery was participated in by the men secured $7,500 and escaped after a battle with officers near De Queen. Green was apprehended in California in November and was taken to Malvern officers for investigation as a suspect in the robbery of a bank at Malvern. Since that time he has been held in the Malvern jail. It is said the suspect's identification as a robber of the Malvern bank is positive than that connecting him with the Horatio robbery, and for this reason he is being surrendered to Sevier county Sheriff J. M. Sutton.

Cashier John James of the Bank at Malvern in November and Mr. James is said to have picked Green from a group of prisoners, and to have positively identified him as one of the men who robbed the bank.

Green was brought to DeQueen on a warrant issued on information filed by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Minn or Milwee in November.

Harlan Defense Witnesses Arrested

Perjury Charged to Former Everts School Trustee by Mine Operator

MOUNT STERLING, Ky.—(AP)—In the midst of defense testimony designed to impeach commonwealth witnesses in the William Hightower trial here Thursday, Joe Cawood, a defense witness, was arrested on a charge of perjury.

Cawood, a former Everts town school trustee, was subpoenaed by the defense to aid the Harlan mine union president's effort to refute charges of murder and conspiracy in connection with the killing of four men at Everts last May.

The perjury warrant was sworn out by Sol Smith, operator of a small mine near Everts. It charged Cawood with perjury in giving testimony for William B. Jones, union secretary, convicted in December and sentenced to life imprisonment. Cawood is free on bond awaiting trial on a murder indictment in Harlan in connection with the Everts clash.

In the Jones trial Cawood was questioned by defense lawyers in an effort to impeach Smith's testimony. He said he visited Smith's house on the morning of the fight and saw Smith lying on a cot. Smith had testified he was near Jones' house that morning.

Bond of $1,000 was made for Cawood defense counsel announced Cawood would be called as a witness, regardless of the perjury warrant.

Hightower had denied to the jury he had ever made threats of violence and J. B. Snyder, a special prosecutor, announced that Ben Cochran, city editor of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Journal, would appear Saturday as a rebuttal witness for the commonwealth.

Riches to Rags

WHEN the papers announced the other day that a man named Leo Melanowski was living in the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor in a middle west city, it didn't sound especially interesting—unless you read on and learned about the man's background.

For Melanowski was one of the big men in the early days of the automobile industry. Three decades ago he was considered probably the best automotive engineer in the country.

At one time Henry Ford asked him for a job. He guided the early development of the motor industry; he once held shares of Ford stock, which, if he had held on to it, would have netted him more than a million and half in cash in 1919.

But today he lives in the home of the Little Sisters of the Poor, and the whole story emphasizes the prodigal way in which business, like life in general, uses human talent in order to get results it wants.

Melanowski is not the only one of the early giants of the automobile trade to wind up in poverty.

David Buick died almost penniless in Detroit a few years ago. R. C. Hanna, who was not among the mighty and the rich when he died recently. An automobile business is not the only business that has tales like that. Nearly every industry can duplicate them.

Just why things like that should happen is not at all clear. No industry ever had a surplus of brains. The old saying, "There's always room at the top," is perfectly true. A man of outstanding ability is always in demand.

And yet—every now and then such a man of that kind gets absolutely nowhere. It is as if there were some hidden and inexplicable rule by which business must sacrifice, now and then, a keen brain to some invisible and malevolent power.

Melanowski, Buick—you could make a long and dismal list. It testifies to one of the most distressing and wasteful elements of modern business.

The House Beautiful

CHANNING POLLOCK has played right in the midst of a cynical New York play that glorifies honesty, sincerity, loyalty. And the most amazing feature associated with it is the unprecedented success of this product of his genius.

He calls his play "The House Beautiful." And they are just commonplace people—the folks that present the drama in all its vicissitudes.

When the hero and heroine of this play meet for the first time their combined salaries equal $58 a week. The wife, who is a stenographer, earns $18, the husband $40.

They buy a house in the suburbs—the house beautiful. You see glimpses of their lives over a period of twenty-two years.

There is no dark-eyed villain for them to cope with. You just see the struggle that they have to make to live for each other.

The husband was honest and there was within him a definite formed determination to travel the straight road. He was tempted on many occasions, but he refused to deviate from the rigid principles that guided his life.

But what makes the play stand out as unique is the fervid devotion, the sacrificial love that binds these two people together. They live for each other absolutely.

Their one child is reared under proper discipline, and though he shows a tendency now and then to stray from the beaten path, he turns out to be his father's son.

A simple story of common people with uncommon ideals and a strong belief in themselves! Humane and human at all times.

But through all the vicissitudes of life there was that steadfast faith in each other, that undying affection that seemed to weld them together with that character of faith that is divinely eternal.

You are surprised when you see this play, so beautiful in its artistry, so exquisitely and delicately rendered, so complete in all its details.

And when you see the crowded house you are inclined to wonder, for we are in the midst of money-mad New York where sentiment is usually classed as nonsense, where love is bought and sold just as you would merchandise.

It is a source of untold satisfaction that a drama built on such fine ideals can succeed so splendidly.

We are not all tainted by modern materialism. There are many exceptions. And there is something about this play that is inspiring. You think more of yourself and your fellow man after having seen it.

And the author! Well, you know what kind of man he is from the development of his characters. He is the salt of the earth. I wish we had more like him. I hope he is rewarded with royalties that exceed the million mark.—Bernarr Macfadden.

TULSA, Okla.—Homer King and Coy Jones found a jug of "jelly" while hunting. They took it home and found that small pinches of it would burn with a bright blaze, they called Officer T. E. H. King, who came and got the jug. He took it in his car over some rough roads to headquarters.

Young Russia in Quest of Knowledge

Looking ahead to a new day, the Russian peasant youth in this picture symbolizes the quest for modern mechanical knowledge which the Soviet government is answering through technical schools established in large industrial centers. This youth, with the standard straw footgear (lapti) and homespun cloth stockings of the worker, is employed in an automobile factory in Nizhni-Novgorod, called "the Detroit of Russia." Every worker must devote part of his time to instruction.

Dale (Red) Jackson, Noted Flier, Killed

Stunting at Miami Fatal to Co-Holder of Endurance Record

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—Dale ("Red") Jackson, daredevil of the skies and co-holder of the world's endurance record for flying, plunged to his death at municipal airport here Wednesday in view of hundreds of persons who watched him stunt a small amphibian plane 3,000 feet above the ground. Jackson had just completed an inside loop when a wing fell away from the plane, as the machine tipped over to the side, the second wing dropped off. The crowd watched for Jackson to jump with his parachute, but he apparently was unable to get clear.

The wingless airplane crashed to the ground about a mile from the stand for judges of the air races. One wing soared away for several blocks before landing.

Jackson's body was found in the pilot's seat, his skull split open. His right hand clutched the ring of his parachute cord.

A pall of gloom was thrown over air meet preparations as spectators and Jackson's fellow pilots rushed across the airport field to view the wreckage. Jackson had been one of the most colorful in American flying history. With Forrest O'Brien, also of St. Louis, he set a world's endurance record July 30, 1929, when they brought the St. Louis Robin to the ground after 420 hours, 21 minutes, 30 seconds of sustained flight. On July 4, 1930, the Hunter brothers set a new record of 553 hours, 41 minutes, 30 seconds, at Chicago.

Determined to regain their lost honors, Jackson and O'Brien went into the air again at St. Louis the next month and on August 17, 1930, set a new world's record of 647 hours, 28 minutes, 30 seconds—31½ minutes less than 27 days of sustained flight.

Mrs. Sally Jackson, the flier's widow, came here with him from their St. Louis home several days ago as he prepared to enter the air races for the fourth time. She was not at the field Wednesday afternoon.

Three Kinds of Love

BY KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

1931, by Doubleday, Doran and Co.

BEHIN HERE TODAY

ANN, CELESTINE and PHIL FRANKLIN live with their grandparents. The sisters have been orphaned since childhood. Their grandfather, known as "OLD PHILIP" and "GRAND" have long since left their wealth and the responsibility of their care to the hands of their grandsons. For this reason, Ann, 25, and Celestine, 22, have been living with their grandsons, who are now in a hardware store. Celestine, 22, is in love with a man named JACKSON, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name the wedding date because she cannot give him the financial responsibility of the home.

Now go on with the story CHAPTER XXVII

ANN did not need to listen; so she breathed a smallish, confused prayer to the gods of garage men that this particular knock in Phil's automobile might emanate from some source, any source, other than clogged piston rods. Phil's responses to that special species of knock were invariable. He began by diagnosing the disease as fatal, since one mechanic named Jake Lucca had left town, and went tranquilly on from there.

His procedure was to drive the car for a few hundred yards and stop it and leap out, and open the hood, and peer despairingly into the insides of the thing, and with an air of suppressing much prophecy that this was the end. Usually, since there was nothing else to be done, he would get into the car again, and start it with difficulty, and go for a few hundred yards more before he leaped out and lifted the hood, and peered, and so on.

Cars, Ann had learned, suffering from this malady are moody, hysterical things; they will knock like a woodpecker and then, once in a while, they will stop and refuse to go another step until, after a short rest, they will pick up with a spurt and stop knocking and pretend that nothing has ever been the matter with them.

If a garage is in sight they will recover completely—cars with diseased piston rods dread garages—until the place has been left miles behind. Then, worn out with the strain exertion of simulating strength where there were only weakness and courage, they will break down for a time and refuse to budge. Ann knew her piston rods. But Phil was a proud man, and thrifty, and to drive a seemingly healthy car into a garage, and to subject himself, or his patient, to a charge of geologist and four or five dollars, was a performance in which he would take no part. So they always "shed by the garages and broke down in some lonely spot on the highway. And then Phil would leap out, talking about Jake Lucca, and open the hood and peer... Stronger women than Ann have come to pieces with less provocation than that afforded by piston rods.

CONVERSATION during calamity is heartless and footless, crippled and offensive, so Ann had long since ceased attempting it. They rode in silence, except for the knock, Phil had his head cocked to one side so that never a vibration of sound should escape him, and Ann had ever so much time to think about the girl who wrote notes that needed to be burned at once, and Phil's night work of late, and the hard, bright antagonism in the girl's eyes.

They had passed a garage in a small town, five miles back, so a relapse was due, and it came, scheduled precisely, on a deserted stretch of road. Phil leaped out; this made the ninth or tenth time within the hour. Ann, too, got out of the car—she usually did so: it seemed more helpful.

Phil lifted the hood and looked at the engine. Ann stood and watched the lights or an oncoming automobile growing larger and larger. She found no encouragement in the fact of its approach. Another of Phil's conventions concerning piston rods was a refusal to ask for aid from other motorists. Jake Lucca alone, in a world full of men, could repair piston rods, and Jake was leagues upon leagues away.

The lights grew larger still, and dangerous seeming, and Ann stepped out of the glare just as the car—the sportiest sort of sports model—slowed and stopped, and a girl's voice called, "Hey, hey, Phil! Some more trouble!"

Phil had started the engine and had his ear to its breast so that he could hear the knocks. Ann receded farther into the shadows.

Letty stepped from the car, and crossed to Phil, and said, her childish voice raised high above the groans of the engine, "What is it, old dear? Piston rods again?" Phil lifted his head, but he did not come back to a complete consciousness of the outside world—a heartless, knockless world where piston rods were of secondary importance. A voice that he knew had greeted him, and he returned the greeting abstractedly.

"Hello, Letty," he said to Miss King, whose first name he was unsure of, could not really remember.

One small cat slinks out of a bag, wisdom may attempt to capture. If dozens of spry black cats, loosed possibly on purpose and all at once, plunge forth to trip and skip and caracole into the night, confounding wisdom, courting and frolicking with folly, nothing much can be done about it. Letty's next remark, addressed to Ann in the shadows and made with one hand on Phil's arm, was, "Doesn't the poor darling have the foulest times with his old piston rods?"

Ann came forth and was introduced as Miss Fenwick to Miss King, and Miss King said politely, "Phil's told me a lot about you."

Miss King's escort came along. His name was Mr. Smith—a nice easy name to remember, and he was glad to know everyone, or so he said. He disclaimed all knowledge of things mechanical, but offered to give Phil a tow, if Phil had a rope. Phil had no rope.

Letty said to Phil, "Say, listen, sweetheart-darling..." Ann and retreated again to the shadows, so she might have been out of earshot; but Kenneth Smith was right there until he walked back to the sports sports model and climbed into it.

Phil said, "Never mind that, now, Letty," and she said, "Yes, but I want to tell you—"

Phil said, "Don't go, Ann. Stay here." And Ann kept right on going, and Letty kept hold of Phil's arm.

Kenneth said to Ann, "Some crush over there," as if he were in pain, and Ann said brightly, "Yes, it does seem to be."

Kenneth sighed; Ann did not. Kenneth offered, "She makes me sick, if I do say it. She used to be a swell woman, but since she's gone pash on that sheik she's one wet smack right. Can't see a wet smack after dinner; can't see a damo thing about shelky and trailing him around. I'm fed, I'm bloated. I'm through. I'm not doing bloodhounding for a living. Not yet."

Ann said sweetly and with sympathy that she did not blame him in the least.

Kenneth opened the car door. "Won't you get in and sit down and wait?"

"Thank you," Ann accepted. "I'll get in and sit down," she sank into the wide depth of the seat, "but why wait?"

Kenneth said, after a moment, "I get you. I'd go in a hurry if his damn car wasn't busted down."

"It isn't," said Ann. "It's his damn" (from Ann!) "stubbornness. The car would run well enough to get home if he'd run it instead of listening to it and looking at it. He'll have to, sooner or later. He has a knock in his engine—that's all. They will get home in good order, in time."

"Sure of it?"

"Positive. Listen to his engine. It will run."

"I'm out!" said Kenneth, and reached with a gesture of violence for the clutch, and he and Ann were off.

American Consul Attacked by Japanese tion of the new high school building, making the point that the present distress of the local district was unaffected on this account, since the first bonds do not mature until two years from now.

"He said the situation had come about all over the state, and more severe in larger cities than Hope, because the schools were forced on a cash basis without any provision having been made for the floating debt that had to be taken care of before the cash basis was actually achieved.

"Sooner or later," he said, "something must be done for the public schools. Power tax bills have been proposed. Mr. Thorne, of North Arkansas, is offering an initiated tax on all utilities—but I don't know what backing he has. I don't believe the Department of Education is in entire accord with him."

"Yet revenue must be found somewhere."

"Tuition has been suggested, and is being tried in some communities, to keep the schools going. Of course it is purely voluntary. Tuition charges in the public schools cannot be enforced at law."

"The school teachers of the city have afforded a fine example of community co-operation by their generous acceptance of a salary reduction proposal which involved many personal sacrifices."

Mr. Graves was presented on a program sponsored by Tom McElarty.

The Einsteins—He's a Freshman Again

When Professor Albert Einstein of Germany, world-famous scientist, arrived in California with his wife to study at the California Institute of Technology he was called a "freshman." That pleased him, for he has always contended that even the greatest mind can only scratch the surface of knowledge. He is shown here with his wife as they sat on the porch of the home of Arthur Fleming in Pasadena.

Once Trophy Contender Caught as Rum Craft

SANDUSKY, Ohio.—(P)—Once a brave contender for the "America" cup, coveted trophy so long sought by the late Sir Thomas Lipton, the "Shark" has been captured by customs officials from the bootleg industry.

Records show the trim little craft was built on the Atlantic 20 years ago, and failed several times to win the cup races.

She was "sold down the lakes." New owners detached her tall, slender masts and installed motors. They removed a 20-ton keel which greatly increased her speed. On three previous occasions she was seized by the coast guard, and each time drifted back into smugglers' hands.

Ball Hawk's Wife Drills Grid Team in Honolulu

HONOLULU.—(P)—Henry Oana, San Francisco outfielder in the Pacific Coast league, may know the "inside stuff" in baseball, but his wife can give him plenty of tips when it comes to the gridiron.

While Oana is busy with his baseball duties on the mainland, his wife, formerly Alma Richardson, is busy coaching a 120-pound barefoot team in Honolulu.

Her team is called the Pearl City Grid. Barefoot team on the island continue their play long after the mainland season closes.

Slants on County Basketball Teams

Basketball Season Finds
Many Teams in Race for District Championship

Activities in the realm of basketball have been resumed after the lay-up for the Christmas holidays. Many teams have played in the past week, some showing promise and others not so good.

Among the leading teams of the county this year is Columbus, who won the district championship last year. Although handicapped by the loss of several of their stellar players, Columbus has built a strong team around the two Gilbert brothers, Gerald and Carl, and bids fair to make a good showing this season. Their next game will be with Patmos Friday night, at the armory in Hope.

Spring Hill always has a strong basketball team, at least it has in the past and this season looks to be another strong one for them. Mr. Honea has several of last year's veterans back and is using them as a basis to build some young material. These lads defeated the Patmos team at the armory last week.

Patmos and Emmet are two other strong teams that are likely to give other teams a struggle when things are being decided around the end of the season. Patmos, has one or two men, such as Dukes and Payne, who have played several years and are looking good this year. Emmet, has a fast bunch of boys who are developing fast and are looking good.

Our own team of Washington is developing into a real threat to the peace of mind of other county teams this season. Pilkinton and Patterson are real ball players as well as the other men on the team. They will likely play a game at the armory in Hope this week.

Flogging Deters Crime, Is View of Welsh Judge

CARDIFF, Wales.—(P)—Flogging should only be administered in special circumstances. Mr. Justice Wright said here when sentencing two men to two years in prison and 18 strokes with the "cat" for robbery.

"This is a cruel punishment," the judge commented, "but it is inflicted only on those who themselves have caused pain to innocent victims."

Starts Over

Juanita Hansen, above, former film star, is back in California with $118,000 awarded her as damages in a suit brought against a New York hotel for being scalded in a shower. She hopes to stake a comeback in the movies.

Paris Women's Hands Grieve American Artist

PARIS.—(P)—Sculptor requires woman with unusually beautiful hands as model," read an advertisement recently published by N. C. Smolin, American sculptor.

Old women, young women, flappers and professional models responded but none of them got the job. "I want an oval hand," he said, "with long tapering fingers with slightly reticulate tips, without furrows; not too vivacious, just an expressive hand."

He didn't find one and now thinks that modern women spoil their hands by too much work.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo.—(P)—Olliver Davenport, 35, killed five of his children, seriously wounded his wife and another child with a hammer and shot himself to death in their farm home near Patton, Mo., early Thursday. He apparently was insane.

French Cavern Reveals Prehistoric Finger Prints

PARIS.—(P)—Finger prints left by prehistoric artists were discovered in a grotto of the Pyrenees by Mm. Mandement and Jauze, archaeologists.

Crawling into the cave, they found on its walls ten high reliefs in clay. All depicted charging buffaloes, four of the images being a foot long.

The clay had been first thrown on

Idaho's Liberal Divorce Statute Fails to Attract

COEUR D'ALENE, Idaho.—(P)—This lake-locked city's dream of becoming the "divorce capital" of the northwest has faded.

When the Idaho legislature passed the 30-day law nearly a year ago, business men started elaborate preparations to attract divorce seekers. Heavily timbered mountains for hiking, a crystal-clear lake for boating and swimming, a variety of winter sports and climate in general were to be capitalized. But Nevada passed a "six-weeks law."

Nearly a year after the Idaho law was passed, an observer and optimist of a year ago said, "We've had only one promising prospect. She was from New York, and we understood she came here for a divorce. Then one day her husband came, found their children in the park and drove away with them. The woman left next day."

the wall and then shaped by hand, the marks of the primitive sculptors' fingers being plainly visible.

Scientifically Purer..

Something every smoker
wants to know!

• Absolutely pure... that's what you expect in the things you eat and drink... and in the cigarettes you smoke.

"Chesterfields are as pure as the water you drink," a noted scientist writes. There's no way to make a purer cigarette.

Starting with tobaccos... the ripest, finest, purest leaf that grows is selected for Chesterfields. Mild to start with... Cross-Blending makes it milder still. Then it's wrapped in paper that is so pure it burns without any taste or odor.

The phrase "Scientifically Purer" is entirely justified. By our use of a highly scientific process which was worked out by Dr. Paul Gross, the Head Chemist of our Research Department, Chesterfield reaches a state of purity unmatched, to our knowledge, by any other cigarette.

In addition, scientists check every ingredient, every method. Even the factory air is washed, and changed every 4 1/2 minutes. More purity!

Notice, too, the clean, white, attractive package... moisture-proof. Chesterfields come to you as good and as pure as they're made. Good... they've got to be good! Change to Chesterfields and see.

A WONDERFUL NEW RADIO PROGRAM!
Tonight... at 10:30... Chesterfield's Radio Program. Light a Chesterfield... lean back... and relax while Nat Shilkret's Orchestra and Alex Gray, soloist, charm away your cares. It's on the entire Columbia Network... broadcast from coast to coast... every night except Sunday. And the hour's 10:30 E. S. T.
